Engaging Men in Addressing and Preventing Sexual and Domestic Violence

Friday, May 6th, 2011

10 AM - 3 PM

There is increased discussion and efforts to educate and engage men in responding to and preventing sexual and domestic violence. These efforts are nearly always initiated by women who are involved with their local sexual assault or domestic violence program, and who are seeking to learn new skills and abilities to effectively educate men in a way that engages them in the work to respond to and/or prevent sexual and domestic violence. This training provides an overview, along with concrete skills and activities, that have been found effective to educate men, and to educate men in a way that engages them in the efforts to combat sexual and domestic violence.
